Announcing the NeighborWorks Achieving Excellence Program:

The NeighborWorks Achieving Excellence Program is carried out in collaboration with Harvard University, is now accepting applications for its next round, set to begin in October 2014. The proven results of Achieving Excellence demonstrate that it is one of the most high-impact programs in the nation for organizations seeking to transform the way they work for even greater results. This 18-month organizational investment program assists 50 experienced leaders (generally Presidents/CEOs) from the fields of nonprofit housing, community and economic development, financing, health and wellness, and other organizations working to benefit their communities as each organization tackles a performance challenge that is most critical to their future success and the communities they serve. With the participant's organizational performance challenge as the focal point, the interdependent components of the program include:

- Three week-long cutting-edge academic sessions developed and delivered by faculty at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government
- Intensive one-on-one executive coaching by a team of top-notch leadership consultants;
- Structured peer group learning and best-practice sharing.

Achieving Excellence provides the forum, the challenge, the tools, the space and the opportunity for leaders to transform their organizations to achieve a higher level of effectiveness and sustainability. For more information or for an application, please go to www.nw.org/ae.
