

Damon McIntyre graduated from Colorado State University in 1998 with a Bachelor's of Science degree in Psychology. Upon receiving his degree Damon then spent the next ten years working as a cognitive behavior counselor, and director, over several programs serving many disadvantaged populations. In 2010 Damon completed his Masters of Business Administration degree at Regis University. Shortly thereafter Damon joined the Denver Housing Authority where he has worked tirelessly, first as a coordinator for the 2007 ROSS grant focusing on employment goals, and then as the Lead Coordinator for the Denver Housing Authority Education and Employment program. Damon manages the Housing and Urban Development Section 3 Program, the Workforce Initiative Now partnership, the Denver Urban Renewal Authority First Source Employment program, and assists as a leader at the Denver Housing Authority Youth Employment Academy. Damon has assisted with the standardization and development of processes for Denver Housing Authority programming and social ventures. As a direct result, Denver Housing Authority Education and Employment Services is a recognized preferred provider for education and employment services throughout the City and County of Denver.
