The USDA provides free or reduced price lunches to 22 million children during the school year through the National School Lunch Program (NSLP). However, during summer break less than 3 million of those students participate in a USDA summer feeding program. You can be a game-changer by feeding more children nutritious meals during the summer and lowering the risk of hunger.

The Summer Food Service Program (SFSP) is a federally funded program administered by the States that helps fill the summer meal gap for low-income children by reimbursing organizations that serve children meals at feeding sites during summer months. Schools, churches, recreation centers, playgrounds, parks, and camps can provide summer meals in neighborhoods with high percentages of low-income families, making a positive impact on the lives of hungry children. These summer food sites are safe and familiar locations where children naturally gather during the summer.

The USDA Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) is offering this webinar so you can learn more about how you can help your public housing authority feed children in need and/or promote SFSP. The webinar will review SFSP participation requirements, cover resources, and tools available to help you get started, highlight successful programs and outreach practices from around the country, and provides an opportunity to have your questions answered by FNS Program experts.

We welcome HUD and all Public Housing Authorities to attend this webinar and learn how to feed hungry children in your community!
